

The Mind's Eye

a stanford journal of expression

Close the eyes gently without contracting the surrounding muscles & elevate the eyebrows, that there may be a smooth surface on which to place the instrument.

*Excerpts from "The Ideal Restoret," (p.1) ©Rebecca Hackemann.
19"x 15" book, sepia-toned silver gelatin prints & letterpress.*

Let THE RESTORER cling to the eyes and work the bulb gently between the thumb & fingers.

*Excerpts from "The Ideal Restorer," (p.2) ©Rebecca Hackemann.
19"x 15" book, sepia-toned silver gelatin prints & letterpress.*

Rebecca Hackemann

Seeing as we think it, is not done by the eyeballs.

*Excerpts from "The Ideal Restorer." (p.4) ©Rebecca Hackemann.
19"x 15" book, septa-toned silver gelatin prints & letterpress.*

In such a case, we highly recommend the

IDEAL BRAIN RESTORER.*

offer valid only in the US.*

*Excerpts from "The Ideal Restorer," (p.7) ©Rebecca Hackemann.
19"x 15" book, sepia-toned silver gelatin prints & letterpress.*